

DESE and WGBH Partnership for Educational Resources

Students have lots of feelings, comments, and opinions about current events, and, with classrooms closed, many are probably missing the space to voice and process what they're thinking with a community of peers and teachers.

We're hearing from teachers that they need resources to help students navigate what is going on around us. We're talking and thinking about that, and getting counsel from teachers and other trusted advisors. Do you have suggestions? Please send them to education@wgbh.org.

For now, we're featuring these resources from PBS LearningMedia that you can use to support discourse among your students.

Resources

Black Lives Matter: Campaigning for Racial Justice

Learn about the origins, objectives, and makeup of Black Lives Matter, an activist Black youth-led movement that campaigns against police brutality and other forms of racism.

FRONTLINE | Police Reform

Students explore a variety of topics related to police reform. Includes a self-paced interactive lesson.

DESE and WGBH Partnership for Educational Resources

Civil Rights: Internet Activism and Social Change

Examine social media's influence in America's Civil Rights movement and its role in democratizing the media.

Who, Me? Biased? Understanding Implicit Bias

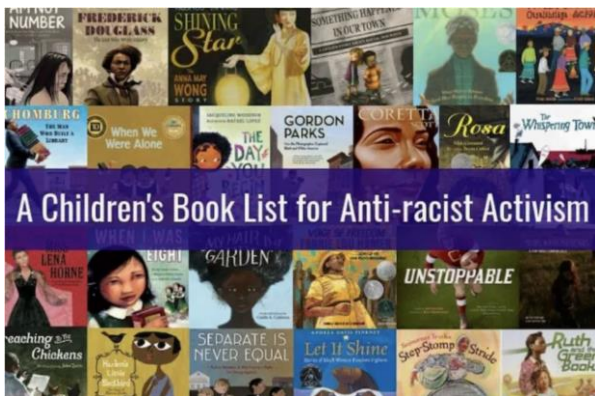

In this interactive lesson, students explore the extent to which society (and they themselves) may discriminate based on factors they're not even aware of, implicit biases.

MORE

From American Experience: an extremely powerful and relevant 1963 interview with author and activist James Baldwin.

Our curated list of additional resources on Civil Rights, Black Lives Matter, police reform, and other relevant topics, available on PBS LearningMedia.

For Younger Students

Looking for resources for younger students? EmbraceRace.org has compiled a list of books for children on the topics of racism and discrimination. Their site also contains links to resources on how to talk to children about race and justice.